PRODUCT NOTES

The typical packaged bare root rose is about 20" tall with 3 or more canes and can be carried home on its side (laying down). A few specimens are much larger or smaller.

Ideally these plants should be installed immediately. If not, store them outdoors in a mostly shaded location (the plastic bag covering the roots should not be exposed to the sun). Indoors is normally too warm and will cause the plants to grow too quickly. Do not expose the bag to freezing temperatures. Note that bare root plants are a perishable product and cannot be stored for more than a few weeks.

WARNING

Most bare root failures are due to unsupervised installation by professional gardeners. We have a "planting guide" available with specific instructions for bare root roses.

REPLANT SYNDROME

Be aware that plants will not grow well in the same soil twice. Roses installed near an existing rose or in the location where a rose died or was removed will show very poor growth.

GENERAL PLANTING TIPS

The roots have to be kept fairly cool and moist or wet at all times. Failure to grow is usually due to damage to the roots or unusual warm dry or windy weather that dehydrates the stems before the roots get established. Trunks and branches are not totally water proof and dry winter winds can cause them to dehydrate. A tall bare root rose bush will lose water much faster than a short one. Don't be afraid to prune. A short healthy rose will grow quickly. A tall dead rose won't grow at all.

When planting in the ground do not use amendments like manure, sawdust, wood chips, bark, leaves or kitchen scraps. Compost of any kind will kill roots. Sand, pumice, perlite, charcoal and peat moss are acceptable.

Fertilizers can be applied after installation but are not essential for health or survival.

When planting in containers use our TOP POT soil. "Washed Sand" & "All Purpose Sand" are also excellent soils in containers. Apply fertilizer within a month of installation.

Guarantee

Our bare root rose are guaranteed for 6 months to begin growth and be true to type or you will receive a refund. To be eligible for a refund you must return the rose and have a receipt or have your name and phone # in our store register.
